TENDERS RESIGATION

W. C. Reynolds, a Veteran Coke Plant Manager, Relieves From Service.

W. C. Reynolds of Conneltsville, general manager of the W. Harry Brown mining and coke interests in Fayette and Greene counties, has tendered his resignation, effective tomorrow.

Mr. Reynolds is one of the veterans in the service, his connection with the management of coke plants dating from the earlier 30's when he was the assistant of Samuel D. Price, superintendent of the Conneltsville Coke & Iron Company's plant at West Lescan.

Later he was in charge of the Central Conneltsville Coke company's plant at Tarr and still later superintendent of W. J. Linsay's Revere plant. Four years ago he took charge of W. Harry Brown's operations at Allegheny No. 1 and later began the development of Allegheny No. 2 mine in Greene county near Look No. 7.

Mr. Reynolds enjoys a wide acquaintance in the coke region and has always inspired the respect and confidence of his associates by his correct and intimate knowledge of every detail of mining coal and making coke. His retirement from active duty has been caused by ill health and a desire to seek a little rest after more than 30 years service.

NEED PATROL
Police Now Must Hunt Drunks to Station in Various Vehicles.

The need for a police patrol has been indicated again and again in the last few days, according to members of the force. Among the vehicles pressed into service to haul prisoners to the lockup recently were a wheelbarrow, a coal wagon, a taxicab and a grocery's truck.

"As much revenue as we are bringing the city, we certainly deserve to be provided with a patrol wagon," one cop said not long ago. It is not likely, however, that a formal petition for a Black Maria will be presented to council, however.

"What the use?" Chief Rottler asked the other day. "We've asked for one before and there was never any action taken." Someone has suggested that the chassis of the No. 3 fire truck, known as "Poley Dink," would be an ideal frame upon which to place a patrol body.

Miss Baker Hostess.

"MOST ANY" CORSET WON'T DO—

It is of interest to most women to look their best at all times.

Physical loveliness stimulates admiration. Looking well is largely a matter of good health—and clothes.

"The woman who cares" should select clothes that will be beneficial to her health as well as pretty to look at—for beauty is the result of keeping well.

Without a good corset, style and health are almost impossible. The woman who thinks that any corset will do usually looks the part.

Design is the principal feature of a corset. Only one corset, the MODART front laced, can claim the skill of Jennings in design—and Jennings is generally accounted the world's foremost corset designer. His skill enables him to combine style, comfort and poise in a garment so it fits perfectly, is comfortable from the moment it is put on and retains its figure lines until worn out.

The MODART Corset is made in a variety of styles, for different types of figures. Every general type of figure, short, tall, stout, those with small bust and large hips, those with small hips and large bust, are taken care of in one model or another.

There is only one way to truly appreciate the style, comfort and poise of a MODART Corset and that is to have a trial fitting. We desire to give you a trial fitting in our department of the MODART model best adapted to your figure. The excellence of our service in combination with the MODART front laced corset will give you new corset comfort and probably better health besides. The hardest test given any corset is in the fitting-room. In the actual trying on of a corset a woman can feel its comfort or discomfort and can see the beauty of its lines. This is the test, we suggest.

We know in our Corset Department what the MODART Front Laced Corset will do for you and we want you to know it, too. There is no obligation on your part to buy. We must satisfy you that we can corset you better with the MODART than you are now corseted or you will not want to buy.

PAIGE

"The Most Beautiful Car in America"

Paige cars are made in three sizes. There are two seven-passenger models which sell for $1495 and $1375. There is also a five-passenger, 39 horsepower model which sells for $1175.

The seven-passenger models are, of course, considerably larger than the "Linwood." They are well worth the difference in price. But we want to point out at this time, that all three of these cars are Paiges—blood brothers of the same strain.

So far as a choice between them is concerned, it is simply a matter of your individual requirements. If you can advantageously use a large, sumptuous, seven-passenger automobile by all means invest your money in a Paige "Stratford-51" or the Fairfield "Six-46."

On the other hand, if a five-passenger model is ample for your purposes, your money in a Paige "Stratford-51" or the Fairfield "Six-46."

You must approach the matter in the same way that you would choose between a one karat and a two karat diamond. All of these cars are clean cut, flawless gems. In their respective price fields, they represent the utmost that you can secure in automobile value.

We are putting the matter before you in this frank way, because we want to be genuinely helpful. We also want to emphasize—just as clearly as we possibly can—that Paige builds only good cars—quality cars.

But—above all—make it a point to see the Paige line before you buy any car. As a business man, you can't afford to overlook the three greatest dollar-for-dollar values in the entire automobile field. This is a broad, sweeping statement, but you can establish the facts to your entire satisfaction.

Will you make it a special point to see "The Most Beautiful Car in America?"

A Lesson in Economy

The other day I went into a fruit store for a dozen bananas. The clerk said they were 15c a dozen. I thought it was too much, and went to another store two squares away and bought the same quality of bananas for 20c a dozen. Now, the first man either did not buy his goods right or he wanted too much profit.

In Wall Paper you will find no such conditions exist at this store. There have been four price advances by the factories since my paper was purchased and I am prepared to make you prices that no one can duplicate. No fancy profits here, but up to date patterns at half others prices. Beautiful paper for all kinds of rooms for 5c, 6c, 7c, 8c, 9c, 10c and 12c the roll. Outlined papers like the built. Over 500 patterns to select from and my prices cannot be duplicated. Come and see. It will cost you nothing to look and may save you dollar.

WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP

Tonight cure! Remove the liver and bowel poison which is keeping your store now? Eat one or two to-night and enjoy the nicest, gentlest liver

are harmless and children love them.

A SAFE TEST

For those who are in need of a remedy for kidney troubles and backache,
it is a good plan to try Doan's Kidney Pills. They are strongly recommended by Connellsville people.

Mrs. J. L. Williams, 512 North Tenth St., Connellsville, says: "About five years ago I was dreadfully ill with kidney complaint. My back ached constantly and I had dizzy spells and headaches during which spots floated before my eyes. The doctors weren't helping me much and my husband finally persuaded me to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I took four boxes and was entirely cured. My health remained good until about six months ago when my back began to be weak and painful again. Of course, I used Doan's Kidney Pills, getting two boxes at Clarke's Drug Store and the pain and ailment of the trouble. My health is now good."

FAYETTE MAN'S TROUBLE FOUND BY NERV-WORTH

One Bottle of This Wonderful Tonic Knocked Joe Dugan's Ailments
Out.

That proves how swiftly this famous family remedy does its work,
for you'll find by the following signed statement that Mr. Dugan's bodily ills were no light affair:

Connellsville Drug Co.—I have been sick for over two months. Had stomach trouble, coughed nearly all night. Couldn't sleep. No appetite.
I didn't feel like eating my breakfast.
I worked about half the time.

I have taken one bottle of NERV-WORTH. Things are different. I'm beginning to feel more like myself again. Cough is better. Appetite coming back. I feel like going to work in the morning.

I feel NERV-WORTH has found my trouble and I recommend the medicine.

This statement is not only exceedingly convincing in the proofs it gives of NERV-WORTH merits but has the maker's name signed, which by the way is a characteristic of NERV-WORTH endorsements, a trait which has had a great deal to do with the tonic's wonderful sales
wherever introduced.

RAILROAD IMPROVEMENTS

Will Be Deferred On Account of the Increasing Costs of Operation; Congress May Be Appealed to.

In consequence of the advance in wages and other increases in the operating costs the Pennsylvania Railroad company has decided to halt the improvement work it has in progress on its system and also to defer other plans that were to be entered upon early in the spring. Nor will any work of the character mentioned be prosecuted pending the determination of the application made by the roads to the Interstate Commerce Commission for authority to increase their service charges.

So urgent is the necessity that the commission, departing from its customary procedure, will consider the application directly, but in view of the circumstance that it contemplates a great increase of rates and that new tariffs have been filed, it is understood generally that the commission will conclude that it is without jurisdiction to comply with the request of the carriers, which then will apply to Congress to afford them relief. Such is the program, and it is proposed by the railroad to carry it through.

The appeal to Congress will be without precedent, but the court of last resort having ruled that that body is vested with authority to determine not only the length of a work day for railroad employees, but the rate of wages to be paid them, it is contended that the power inheres in it also to determine service charges of employers.

Unless the carriers shall be afforded the relief they seek, they will be unable, according to a highly placed official, to earn more than sufficient to meet their actual operating costs in the future, and the same authority predicts that in any event many railroads will be compelled to pass their dividends this year.

The most extensive improvements planned by the Pennsylvania railroad were to have been made west of Pittsburgh, although large expenditures have been authorized in the eastern territory. Those, including the proposed 50-mile extension into Detroit, will now be held in abeyance.

THE NEW COAL TAX BILL

Being Considered by the Joint Revenue Commission Which Favors Measure: Operators Will Fight It.

The Joint Revenue Commission is said to be paving the way for the introduction of the bill imposing an ad valorem tax of 2 per cent. upon all coal mined in the state. This bill provides for the return of one-half of the tax collected to the county in which the money was raised to be used for general county purposes.

Attorney General Brown, who has been studying the laws of other states which tax their natural resources, stated that the agreement on the 2 per cent. tax involved the support of practically every member of the powerful revenue commission. That a fight on the tax is expected from both the anthracite and bituminous interests is apparent.

Attorney-General Brown and James E. Roderick, chief of the Department of Mines, have been gathering data to submit to the revenue commission to indicate how much money would accrue to the state and to the counties from the collection of this tax.

The Davis bill, now in the House Committee on Ways and Means, imposing a tax of 2½ per cent. and deducting half of the tax to the municipalities of the counties, will be amended to conform with the agreement of the commission.

Under existing law, the money cannot be used except for governmental purposes, and whether any fund collected as a general tax can be applied to a special purpose of this kind remains for the state's legal department to work out. So far, the attorney-general has not been interested in distribution of the tax, the principal effort being put forward to convince the legislature that a general tax on coal production is needed and possible.

PETEY BINK—Maybe Pete Could Beat the Women at Backgammon.

By C. A. Voigt.

Novelized by William A. Page From Maurice V. Samuels' Great Biblical Drama of the Prodigal Son, Presented at the Manhattan Opera House, New York

Copyrighted, 1917, by William Elliott, F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gust.

The woman was smartly dressed, but in cloth of too loud a color. Upon her breast jewels gleamed, and around her neck hung a string of golden beads. She was young and plump and of mild, pleasant aspect. Her eyes showed lines of dissipation. She wore golden sandals upon her feet and shiny rings upon her fingers, and in her dark and glittering eyes there was an evil look. But she smiled ingratiatingly as she returned Tola's salutation.

"So, Tola, thou hast returned?" she exclaimed.

"Yes, and I bring thee a lodger, good Nadina," responded Tola. "My Lord Jether, the son of the rich Judean Jesse, who would spend much time and money with thee, my friend Nadina. 'Tis his first visit to Jerusalem, and thou hast instructed him, thou and thy daughter Tisha."

Nadina clasped her hands as though already counting the shekels and said:

"Thou hast brought thy friend to the house of a friend," she responded. "It pleases thee perhaps to jest, for sure, but the fact is a handsome boy and seven not like a stranger to Jerusalem. He since thou dost ask that Nadina and my darling Tisha should instruct him and care for him here in the city thy word is law. I will order my servants to prepare the best chamber in my house for thy friend."

As Jether bowed in acknowledgment and the servants disappeared to obey her orders Tola whispered to her quickly:

"If I have brought thee gold, good Nadina, pledge me thy word that thou wilt share equally with me or purchase I may take him elsewhere."

Nadina darted a glance of defiance at him, but he clasped her hand roughly and added, "Swear—swear now by the goddess Ishtar, whom I know thou fearest."

"I swear," faltered Nadina. "Thou shalt have thy share."

Having been conducted by two Nubians to the most beautifully appointed room in the house of Nadina and having seen his precious treasure-box carefully locked in a great cedar chest, the key of which he placed safely in his girdle, Jether joyfully returned to the garden, where Nadina and Tola were engaged in a conversation which seemed on the point of becoming an argument of great intensity, when their voices were suddenly lowered at his approach.

"And what thinkest thou of my house?" inquired the smiling Nadina, turning abruptly from Tola.

"It is one like me from the country," replied Jether, "it surpasses all imagination. My dreams of the city have been realized and more."

"Ah, but wait until thou hast seen my Tisha—my dove," added the fond mother, clapping her hands and bid-

Many wealthy suitors have sought my Tisha in vain, yet always hath she rebuffed them with laughter and disdain. But now she comes."

The girl came toward them warily. Her soft, undulating movements suggested a snake in the grass, and her long, languid evolutions of a python. She was fair indeed to look upon, though dark of skin and of eye. She was young—barely more than sixteen—but already the wisdom of the world was hers. Her thick dark hair had been cut short so that it fell only to her neck, and a great golden comb held back the tresses from her forehead. Her gown was richly ornamented with beads and golden embroidery, and her sandals were of some kind of cloth of silver. Upon her fingers were shiny rings, emeralds and rubies, which sparkled in TISHA AND JETHER. He Felt Her Arms Steal Around His Neck.

In the evening twilight as she raised one hand to brush back some rebellious lock of hair.

"That now dost thou desire of me, my mother?" she asked, with a bored, impatient glance taking in the young Jether and a look of resentful contempt toward the smiling Tola.

Nadina came to the laughing young girl and said:

"I would have thee meet Jether, a mighty prince of Judea, and thou must be a handmaiden."

The girl drew herself up proudly.

"Nay, I will not do," she retorted. "Thou art no handmaiden."

Nadina quickly placed her hand over the girl's mouth to choke off any remark. The other whispered a warning.

"Now, by the goddess Ishtar, thou shalt do my bidding," she added sharply. The girl bowed her head in submission and sat down at her half kneeling before him.

"Thy Tisha stands before thee, Jether," she said obediently, and would have knelt, but Jether restrained her by taking her hand.

"Thou shalt not kneel," he commanded. "Thou art beautiful."

Tisha laughed, melodious, rippling laugh.

"Thy servant is as if she please thee," she answered coquettishly. "I but do the bidding of my mother, for her word is law to Tisha. Still, on my own behalf, I would welcome thee to Jerusalem and thy wife and maid after thy journey. Dost come far?" she added, after glancing the Nubians bring refreshment.

"From Hebron," explained Jether, seating himself on a divan and motioning to the seat beside him. Tola and Nadina, with a look of understanding, left them alone, and as Jether entered the house it could be seen at the two and once more resumed the argument as to the amount of Tola's commission for bringing the rich young Jether to this resort of pleasure.

"And stayest thou long?" inquired Tisha.

"As long as thou dost make me welcome," replied Jether, for they had now lost his sense of awe as the beautiful girl sat beside him and as smiling glances in his direction. The girl laughed and leaned slightly in his direction. A perfume delicate and sweet assailed his nostrils. He reached out and took her hand.

"As long as thou dost desire to stay so long will we make thee welcome," whispered Tisha, "thou son of Judea."

The girl bowed toward him. Her head was tilted back. Jether's eyes filled with a mist. The color of her perfume was irresistible. She laughed and showed her wonderful gleaming teeth of purest white. Impulsively the boy threw his arms around her. He felt her arms steal around his neck and clasp him tightly to her. They kissed, and in that kiss the soul of Jether for the first time in his life was bruised and tarnished by contact with the world.

CHAPTER VII.

"In the house of Nadina."

On days and nights Jether lived in the house of Nadina and counted neither cost nor time.

Days of heavy and unsatisfying sleep were followed by nights of drinking and carousing, of dining with the men of the gay throng who frequented the house of Nadina, and of wonderful hours spent in the company of Tisha, who for his sake abandoned all others and listened not when they begged her to drink a goblet of wine with them.

And it was indeed a strange company who frequented the house of Nadina. The favorite of the visitors was the son of the wealthy Abdon, a handsome and athletic young man with long, curly locks of hair that was almost black. Not only for his money, but for his good looks, was he popular with the two score or more of familiable ladies who found the house and garden of Nadina a comfortable resting place. Hadadum, an Arab horse dealer, who gambled heavily with Put at the dice table; Parsodius, a Mede, who traded in Jerusalem on a secret mission, and Madia, the Egyptian, were other friends who spent much time in the house of Nadina.

One day Barzil, the tax collector for King Solomon, brought with him Hagah, a stern and solemn virgin Jewess, who gazed disapprovingly at the statue of Ishtar, goddess of love, in the shrine in the garden. Hagah took Jether by the arm and sought to reason with him.

"Thou, too, art a son of Judea," said Hagah kindly. "Dost know that all of these people are idolaters, worshippers of the gods of Babylon, and that Nadina herself and her daughter Tisha are all Babylonians?"

But Jether, overcome by the fumes of wine, laughed.

"What matter?" he cried. "What if they do worship these things of stone and wood. Does that make Tisha less father? I care not. I myself am a Judean."

Hagah shook his head sorrowfully and went his way.

And there, too, came Sadyk, the Jew, the crafty old man, with his wares always in the case before him hanging from his shoulders. Before and after each visit he spoke quietly and secretly with Nadina, and after a purchase by one of the men of a bauble or a golden bracelet for one of the young women Sadyk would give Nadina several coins for herself.

As for Jether, though his store of gold in the teakwood box was fast diminishing and he now hesitated to count the remaining shekels, when placing coins in his purse, he regarded supreme in the household. For more days and nights than he could easily reckon he had lived there and cared nothing for the future in spite of the warning of Tola that some day his store of gold would be exhausted and he should make plans to replenish his supply by sending word to his father in Hebron.

Thus it happened that one day as late in the afternoon Jether lay sleeping heavily upon a divan in the garden, with Nadina's handmaiden Borsippa lazily fanning him with a great ostrich feather fan, Ahab, the servant of the wealthy Ishtar, through the archway, observing that Jether still slept, he whispered to Borsippa that he had a message for the Judean from his master.

"Nay; I may not waken him," explained Borsippa. "I do but keep the flies and bees away while he sleeps, for my mistress, Tisha, became weary of him in his drunken sleep and bade me take her place. He awoke this day, as men do who revel through the night."

Ahab pointed to the purse which hung from Jether's girdle.

"And have spent all?" he inquired. Borsippa frowned and shook her head.

"Had he not gold in plenty, thinkest thou, fool, that he could still lord it in Nadina's house?" she demanded.

"Then he must have spent it all," retorted the crafty Ahab, drawing nearer to the sleeping Jether. "My own master never sleeps when gold is beneath my nose."

Borsippa threatened him with the fan.

"Ere he fell into slumber he bade my mistress sit by him," she said. "Now, if any gold is missing I will be blamed."

Ahab stooped over the boy and listened to his heavy breathing.

"If he be heavy with sleep what matters it? And if he be rich were it not well that we should be less poor?" His fingers groped within the purse, and several golden coins sparkled in the light.

"Take not so much that he will miss it and blame me," whispered Borsippa. "Yet take enough to be content with half, for I must have my share."

He quickly heaved the girl two of the coins, as Jether stirred in his sleep and muttered unwarily, "I'll not have my brother Gai the master over me."

Borsippa in hiding her color accidentally dropped the fan, and it struck Jether, who awoke angrily. He gazed about him in search of Tisha. She was not there, and he demanded angrily:

"Where is thy mistress?"

"But this moment gone within, my master," explained the girl. "Ahab, the servant of Put, is here with tidings from thy friends."

"My master bade me say," bowed Ahab, "that he will visit thee shortly, bringing some friends."

"Say that they will be welcome," cried Jether, struggling to his feet. "And you, Borsippa, go and find thy mistress. I like it not that she does leave me so often."

Ahab bowed again as Borsippa sped away to find the absent Tisha.

My master bade me say further that in the cool of the day, for thy delight and his, he will bring with him a company of dancing maidens, the fairest of all Jerusalem."

Jether tossed him a coin and nodded in approval.

"This for thyself," said Jether grandly. "And tell thy master he hath done well."

Ahab turned and departed just as from the house Tisha, in angry mood, approached Jether. The girl was in a feverish temper and stamped her foot.

"What now dost thou demand?" she cried. "I but left to make ready to greet thy friends, for some will surely come."

Jether, understanding nothing toward her, for the wine was still within him, bade her be gone.

"I will not have thee greet my friends today," he said petulantly. "I have observed thy ways with them, Tisha."

The girl, who had picked up a peach from a basket of fruit near by and had already taken one bite of the luscious fruit, threw it from her angrily. It splashed into the pool. She sneered him defiantly. Jether sought to pacify her.

"Nay, be not angry, Tisha. What I say comes from my love of thee."

"What dost thou know of love?" retorted Tisha angrily. "Thou with thy unadorned throat to drink my lips. Dost never think I may grow weary of such sport?"

Jether tapped his girdle significantly, and the gold coins tinkled.

"Thy mother bade thee be my handmaiden," he said authoritatively.

"I have I not obeyed?" inquired Tisha tersely. "For weeks now thou hast lived in my mother's house and claimed me ever. Tola when he brought thee to us told us how rich thou wert. Yet but for his word we might not know thee from a beggar."

"I have given freely," cried Jether, full of anger. "At my father's house we have all fed for a year for much less than I have spent already."

The girl frowned before him and laughed mockingly.

"Why then dost thou not stay in thy father's house?" she sneered, with a scornful laugh. "O thou vain Judean, dost think we love thee for thyself alone? Dost thou expect here to occupy the richest room in my mother's mansion, and then dost claim me as thy handmaiden, yet richer suitors by far have I scorned and all because my mother bade me wait upon thee. Some day, I tell thee, my mother will go too far, and then her Tisha will rebel."

Jether drew back sharply as he realized the true sentiment behind her remarks.

"When first I came," he said slowly, "dost thou not say thy love was mine and mine alone? Yes, even the more because, unlike thy merchants and thy other suitors, I did not talk forever of gold and losses. Thou didst love to hear the simple tales of old Judea. Did not thy mother say it pleased her well to give me the best room in all her house and three handmaidens? How have I changed? True, I have lived among the hills and lost some things they have who live in cities. Yet not one of them could love thee as I do," he added, seeking to take her in his arms.

Tisha eluded him. "Of all the friends who each day feast with thee not one would fail to show me greater kindness than thou," she retorted. "Take notice, thou Judean. I swear by my lady Ishtar, and who pointed to the statue. 'I swear by my lady Ishtar, if thou wilt have thy Tisha love thee longer, then must thou show thy love better.'"

"Tisha, I love thee!" cried Jether, and would once more have taken her in his arms, but she eluded him. He sought to catch her, but she rounded the edge of the fountain, and when he had finally caught her and held her in his arms, he kissed her. The girl, her passion spent, her anger vented, hung softly in his arms until a voice made them both realize that they had been interrupted. They turned. It was Nadina, and behind her stood Sadyk, the Jeweler.

Nadina came toward Jether, smiling, with Sadyk, the Jeweler, close behind her. The aged man, bowing obsequiously, stroked his long white beard with one hand, while with the other he carefully guarded the tray of jewels which hung before him.

Jether turned, angry at the interruption, for they had caught him in things regarding Nadina, and he had not been slow to observe the ways of Sadyk on more than one occasion.

"Well, what seekest thou now?" he inquired, while Tisha, a new light in her eyes as she beheld the wonderful jewels of Sadyk, clung close to Jether.

"Ah, Jether, a wonderful necklace I have seen," cried Nadina joyously. "Such a necklace thou shalt give to Tisha, as Sadyk, the Jeweler, hath just shown to me. Ever since childhood my love hath yearned for strings of golden beads. Now Sadyk has such an one."

Jether turned, angry at the interruption, for they had caught him in things regarding Nadina, and he had not been slow to observe the ways of Sadyk on more than one occasion.

"Well, what seekest thou now?" he inquired, while Tisha, a new light in her eyes as she beheld the wonderful jewels of Sadyk, clung close to Jether.

grudge her a paltry ornament she hath set her heart upon."

Jether turned abruptly upon the Jeweler, who stood bowing and nodding his head in approval, as he beheld a possible sale of the necklace he held in his hand.

"I like not Sadyk, who deals in Jewels," said Jether shortly. "Another time!"

Nadina laughed contemptuously and turned to her daughter.

"It is just as I have told thee, Tisha. He loves thee not."

"I would be loved for myself and not for my gifts," retorted Jether spitefully. "I would give my gifts for pleasure, not as a price."

Nadina motioned to Sadyk, and the Jeweler, who had been waiting close to Jether and kneeling before him.

"O most noble prince, Sadyk implores thy favor," he whined.

Jether eyed him suspiciously and bade him rise. "What wouldst thou have of Jether?" he asked curtly.

The aged man rose to his feet and held out a necklace for Jether to examine.

"Wilt thou, O prince, as favorite of the gods, be first to give upon this necklace? It has been worn by one of the royal house of Egypt. I have refused for it a thousand shekels. But what of that? Should Tisha wear it?" Tisha, the fairest offering of Babylon and thine own handmaiden—great would become the fame of Sadyk, who hath other things to sell. Take it for naught to give to her. and thee, great prince, what is 400 shekels?"

Tisha, with a little gurgle of pleasure, sprung close to Jether and gazed longingly upon the bauble in the outstretched hand of the Jeweler. She looked up at the boy and smiled seductively.

"If thou dost love me, Jether, as thou sayest," she pleaded.

Jether impulsively sought to clasp her in his arms.

"Thy kiss—now—I would have thy kiss!" he cried. She laughed and slipped from his outstretched arms and stood, mocking him.

"First thou shalt prove thy love," she cried, whereat Nadina turned her face away to conceal a smile, and even the cringing old Sadyk coughed.

Seeing Jether hesitate, as moved by love he sought to catch the arm of Tisha, Nadina whispered to the Jeweler:

"For what thou lovest, Sadyk, on this necklace, may our beloved lady Ishtar return to thee tenfold." She pointed to the shrine of the Babylonian goddess, and Sadyk bowed humbly in submission of the edict.

A NEW ALIGNMENT IN COKE; SPOT AT NO LARGE PREMIUM

Extended Delivery Situation Is Strong and Likely to Remain So.

PRODUCERS NOT QUOTING

On Furnace Coke For Second Half, But
Are Not Disposed to Sell at $7 Which Is Probably More Than Consumers
Will Bid: Wide Range on Foundry.

Special to The Weekly Courier.
PITTSBURGH, March 28.—With a very limited buying demand for spot coke and an improved car supply the coke market has shown its inherent strength, as prices for spot have remained only very slightly. Thus the market is under a new alignment, wherein spot delivery is at no large premium over contract, and the value of coke on contract is correspondingly enhanced. Until very recently the high prices for spot coke have been regarded as premium prices for delivery,
but the present situation is that coke
is high priced because it is coke, whether now or six months hence. If the situation were not strong for extended deliveries spot prices would have tumbled in the past week. They have been supported by prospective conditions over the remainder of the year rather than by heavy buying pressure for spot shipment.

As to actual contract prices, however, there is practically nothing being developed. It appears that the producers are more shy than are the consumers about making commitments.
The producers could probably secure bids from some consumers as to second half contracts, but they are in no mood to solicit them. It is believed that a few furnaces bought only for the quarter now expiring, and that they may be in the market for second quarter, in which case a second quarter market is likely to be developed at around $8.00. As to second half no consumer appears to have bid as high as $7.00 but it is quite improbable that any producer would sell at that figure, despite the fact that recently foundry coke sold for second half at as low as $6.50. Some producers are now quoting $9.00 on second half foundry coke, but the price does not appear to have been paid as yet.

The commonest sales price for spot furnace coke the past few days has been $8.50, but some sellers are understood to be quoting up to $9.00.
Brokers have been able to pick up an odd lot occasionally at $8.25, possibly even at $8.00, but they would not sell such coke at less than $8.50 in any case. There has been a wide range on spot foundry coke in the past week,
some sales being at much higher prices than others.

Foundry coke dealers are evidently out for the money and are asking whatever price the individual buyer will pay. As high as $12.00 has been paid by consumers in the past week,
and yet practically all week there has been some coke available at $10.00 to dealers, the dealer to get his profit, and thus $10.50 to $11.00 seems to be a fair quotable range. The market stands therefore about as follows:

Spot furnace ..... $8.50 to $9.00
Contract furnace, nominal, 12 months ..... $10.00 to $11.00
Spot foundry ..... $10.50 to $11.00
Contract foundry ..... $8.00 to $9.00
The coal market has stiffened as to contract, but is easier as to spot. The general view is that as to both coal and coke easy conditions will prevail
until the opening of the lake navigation when on account of car shortage,
and perhaps labor shortage, also, prices will be higher. It is difficult to find a seller of coal for the coming twelve months at $2.50. Spot is $2.50 to $2.75 for steam and $4.00 to $4.25
for gas, with not nearly as much buying pressure as there was.

The advance in pig iron is unabated.
Bessemer being up $2 a ton and basic $3 a ton as compared with prices one week ago. Pig iron is expected to grow scarcer and scarcer, and some observers who have made a reputation for conservatism now have no hesitation in predicting $50 pig iron any within a couple of months. Current sales are only fairly large, sellers marking up prices again as soon as they have sold a moderate tonnage at an advance, precisely as they were doing for six months ago. The market
now stands as follows:

Bessemer ..... $38.00 to $40.00
Basic ..... $40.00 to $42.00
Prompt foundry ..... $35.00 to $37.00
Prompt malleable ..... $33.00 to $35.00
Forward foundry ..... $35.00 to $37.00
Forward malleable ..... $33.00 to $35.00
These prices are for 20 lb. pigs.
Furnaces, prices delivered, Pittsburgh
being higher by the 95 cents freight.

ELECT OFFICERS

Casselman River Smokeless Coal Co.
Fully Organized.
The Casselman River Smokeless
Coal company has elected the following officers: President, W. G. Barthelst; vice president, R. M. Rupp, Hagerstown; second vice president,
Irwin Hull, Hanover; treasurer, Daniel E. Dowlin, Hagerstown; assistant treasurer, Frank E. Buekey, Cave-town; secretary and general manager, J. H. Crowe, Uniontown.

The company is capitalized at $100,- 000 and owns 1,000 acres of coal land outright and controls 2,000 additional acres along the Baltimore & Ohio
and Western Maryland on Casselman river. The plant will have a capacity of a daily output of 1,000 tons.

Welfare at Curtis Bay.
A welfare department for employees
is provided at the new Curtis Bay
coal pier at Curtis Bay, Baltimore.
Shower baths, eating and rest rooms
are among the features provided.

Coke at St. Louis.
Connellsville and Virginia 72-hour foundry coke is quoted nominally at $12.50 to $13 a net ton ovens for immediate shipment, and $8.50 to $10.50
for second half.

COKE TRADE SUMMARY.

Last week shipments of coke
made the third progressive gain of the month of March, rising by an increase of 15,000 tons to a total of 372,000 tons, which exceeds any previous week of the year. Production made nearly an equivalent gain, the increase being about 16,000 tons.

While there is a general augurment in the trade situation it is more or less speculative and abor-tived. There is still great irregularity in our distribution, both as to the number and kind of cars.
One day cars for certain destinations will be fairly plentiful, but for other destinations comparatively few or none. The next day
the conditions may be reversed,
while on other days a very limited supply for all destinations will be placed. A shortage of train labor is beginning to be felt to some extent.

A new alignment has been made in the coke market, there being no large premium for spot over contract coke. The extended delivery situation is strong and likely to remain so. It being realized that coke is scarce and will continue short in supply for some time, perhaps a year. Spot furnace ranges $8.50 to $9.00; contract, $7.00 to $8.00. Spot foundry, $10.50 to $11.00; contract, $8.00 to $9.00.

STEEL ORDERS ON A LARGE SCALE

Principally Bars, Plates and Shapes.
The $50 Mark in Pig Iron in Sight.
Further Advances Predicted.

Special to The Weekly Courier.
NEW YORK, Mar. 28.—The American Metal Market and Daily Iron & Steel Report will review the steel and iron trade tomorrow as follows:

Bookings in the steel industry continue on a large scale, in those lines
in which the mills will sell at all.
In bars, plates and shapes the bookings in the past week have averaged with some mills much larger than in the four weeks preceding. In sheets and tin plates there is practically no business, the mills not having opened books for second half deliveries, while they are sold up for the earlier period. A Wheeling pipe interest has made a five-point advance and the trade is curious to see whether such an advance can become general.

Pig iron continues to advance sharply, the average advance in all districts in the past fortnight being approximately $3 a ton, and at this rate the $50 market predicted in some quarters would be reached almost exactly on June 1st. At these high ranges the usual differentials between grades and districts become unimportant. Predictions of further advances are based upon the view that demand, both at home and abroad,
will increase.

While there was some rush business in steel for government account placed recently the interest tendency seems to be to exaggerate the tonnage of government steel placed.
The chief thing that has been done thus far is to rearrange
old orders for earlier delivery than was contemplated. It is understood the copper producers have offered the government 45,000,000 pounds of copper at the average price of the past ten years. This would be 24% of last year's production. As similar offer on the part of steel producers would be 720,000 tons of steel at about 1.55¢ for plates and shapes.
Transportation conditions continue to improve slowly, current supplies of coal and coke being nearly adequate, while steel shipments slightly exceed production.

CAR SHORTAGE IS INCREASING

Loss in Month of February Was About 16,000 Cars; Two Years Ago
There Were 275,000 Idle Cars.

Compared with February, there was an increase of about 16,000 in the car shortage on March 1. In February the net shortage was reported as being 109,288. On March 1 it was 124,973. A year ago the net shortage was 105,537.

For the whole period of nearly eight years preceding the middle of August 1916, says the report of the American Railway Association, there had been a continuous net surplusage of cars not in use on American railroads
except for about one month in 1909, three months in 1912, one month in 1913 and the month of March last year. In 1908 there was at one time a surplusage of more than 413,000

cars, and at no time during the year were there fewer than 100,000 idle cars.

From November, 1913, until March, 1916, there was a continual surplus-age of cars, the number running in October, 1914, to more than 20,000, when the surplus became so large that the American Railway Association stopped compiling them. Compilation was resumed on February 1, 1916,
when idle cars still numbered more than 279,000.
